Submitted by Mazal Renford on behalf of the Council of Women's Organizations in Israel

Further to the ICJW Policy on Environment and Sustainable Development and reaffirming the Beijing Platform for Action, the Rio +20, the Lima Work Programme on Gender adopted at COP20 in 2014, the Paris Agreement in 2018, and the Glasgow Climate Pact, the International Council of Jewish Women calls upon its members and affiliates

To forge coalitions in order to ensure that stakeholders recognize the centrality of women's roles in all environmental and disaster-reduction policies and adopt a holistic and coordinated approach to integrating a gender perspective in all programs dealing with climate change and natural-resource management.

To cooperate with environmental civil-society associations, national institutions, and UN bodies for the effective implementation of such policies and programs, emphasizing the need to incorporate a gender perspective in the development and implementation of disaster and risk reduction and mitigation and recovery strategies.

To work toward the inclusion of women at national and local levels in all decision-making bodies that design and plan environmental and climate-change projects, ensuring that gender concerns and women's specific needs are taken into consideration.
